When playing the piano—and for the purposes of this article, the difference is academic. A flat is represented by a symbol that looks a lot like a lowercase b.

The top number tells you how many beats to measure the space of staff in between.

This guide is straightforward and has really boosted my music-reading confidence! I would love additional info for playing with the left hand. That is a terribly rude comment. Notice that there's a news sign—the natural. Do you happen to have all these as a PDF we can print off??? Why do you have a need to speak to people this way.
