Exaggerated ascetic practices undermined his health and he fell into a state of deep depression. Mysterious legends about Gogol are being created, and the actual reason for his death is the subject of arguments today. The writer lived in poverty and wore old clothes.

He didn't sail but briefly toured Germany. Having mistaken a well-dressed woman for a sailor, he was arrested. He explained this as a mistake, a practical joke played on him by the Devil.

Very early he developed a dark and secretive disposition, marked by a painful self-consciousness and boundless ambition.
