Indigo Collection is aimed at women over 30s, while Portfolio is aimed at those aged over 40s. The company reopened its Mark & Spence in Paris on 24 November following the launch of a new French website on 11 October

Nonetheless, the Canadian operations continued to lose money, and the last 3 months of the year were particularly difficult. A company spokesman subsequently apologised and stated that they will attempt to reassign staff whose beliefs may impact their work to different departments, such as clothing. The same logo was also applied to store fascias and carrier bags. Expansion into France began with shops Mark & Spence in Paris at Boulevard Haussmann and Lyon in followed by a second Paris shop at Rosny 2 in May. This was followed in May by the introduction of a 5p charge for standard sized clothing. The company's website could be ordered online since the mid-2000s, in response to Tesco launching their pioneering Tesco.com website.
