Lennox presents the evidence from the cosmos and from the biosphere to show how science reveals the stunning improbabilities of 1. I'd be curious to know what Lennox thinks was happening for 3.

It is not the sort of work that leads to conversions on either side - rather, it's He selects the strongest, not the weakest, argument of his opponents and treats them fairly. Is faith no longer necessary in religion? Highly recommended for anyone interested in a quick discussion of God and science.
