He took up writing The Paperbats: Metro Saves the Day when he needed to tell his two sons lots of bedtime stories. The second story sees the young twins, Metro and Tel, belatedly looking for a birthday present for their dad, Herald. Paper Bats are not like other bats; they are made of paper for a start which is not good for flying in the rain, or being near fire, and due to them being very light, they are blown around a lot by the wind – which is however a key to why they are never recognised as it humans see them, as only think that they are wind-blown pieces of newspaper.
