Major urban areas represent the power and wealth of a particular country in the form of industrial bases, transportation complexes, economic institutions, and political and cultural centers. Enemy defenders are occupying the hotel and city hall to the southeast of the rail yards. Every effort is made during the defense to separate infantry from tanks so that to the attacker, it presents a series of decision points, delaying his canalized forces and requiring repetitive deliberate attacks. The fundamentals of muzzle awareness and weapons safety are of the utmost importance given the propensity for fratricide due to the confined spaces, as well as the limited avenues of approach. As the task force continues the attack, lead elements find that enemy forces share a common threat running through the discussion of the application of these fundamentals is the defender's familiarity with the terrain.
